About INDEN EST.1582

400 years ago in Japan, INDEN began crafting durable, functional designs for popular Samurai warriors to use as decorations for war armor.

The leather used was so light-weight, flexible, and unique, that the items were eventually recognized as more than just battle accessories.

Many Japanese civilians and trendsetters began looking up to the Samurai warriors for fashion and style inspiration, and from there the INDEN fashion house was born.

We been making luxurious designs for over 400 years, and the history behind the brand stands firmly behind the high-quality deer leather, and the natural sheen of wooden lacquer that is adorned by hand on the exterior of each item.

The lacquer not only protects the leather, but covers the design with a unique, hand-pressed pattern that makes every product truly one-of-a-kind. Our products are all hand made in Japan.
